

August 2019

Established in 2006, the Global Cabin Air Quality Executive (GCAQE) is the lead organisation globally representing pilots, cabin crew, maintenance, aviation other workers and public groups calling for solutions to poor supply air aircraft cabin air quality.

Why should your union or association consider joining the GCAQE?

- We currently have over 35 pilot, cabin crew and engineering unions or associations and other public organisations as members. We meet annually for a two-day meeting in London.
- Tap into our unmatched global expertise specifically related to bleed air contamination.
- The GCAQE has developed a leading reputation on the cabin/bleed air topic that is recognized by worker organisations, government, academia and industry.
- We organised the biggest conference ever held on the topic in London in 2017 and have another London conference scheduled for September 2019.
- We have secured over US$ 2 million of research into lubricant toxicology and medical research. The GCAQE has also facilitated with our members, air and swab sampling, as well as Ultra Fine Particle (UFP) measuring on aircraft.
- We are driving a large number of international actions forward on this topic and it is our knowledge and international approach that is ensuring real solutions are developed covering all aspects: Flight safety, operational, regulatory, design, OHS, health, political...
- We are developing a unique global online reporting system called GCARS – Global cabin Air Reporting System. GCARS will for the first time enable data to be globally collected and analysed.
- Join our global network of aircrew/aviation personnel and share knowledge via an online website; database, regular newsletter updates and focussed working groups.
- Help us to educate your members in relation to cabin air contamination.
- Don't assume others will fix the problem for you or that there is no problem. We are ensuring that solutions are coming, but we need to work together to ensure they are suitable and implemented.
- We have a very loud voice together. Become part of the solution and work within a globally highly respected cabin air quality team.
- The GCAQE was recently incorporated as a Company Limited by Guarantee based in the UK, which gives us a more formal structure, however we remain a non profit organisation.
- To join up, please email the gcaqe@gcaqe.org and ask for details. www.gcaqe.org
